DESCRIPTION

Bus stop bench designed by Kiyonori Kikutake and Itsuko Hasegawa in the 1960s. This bench is notable for its minimalist and functional design, emblematic of the Japanese approach to public furniture. It reflects Japan's dedication to merging design and practicality in shared spaces.

The bench features three seats crafted from orange thermoformed fiber plastic (FRP), offering comfortable and ergonomic seating with asymmetrical armrests. Supported by a sturdy chrome-plated metal frame, the bench ensures
